

Breast Cancer Death Rates VS. Uninsured Rates

Percent of U.S. Women Who Develop Breast Cancer over 10-, 20-, and 30-Year Intervals According to Their Current Age, 2008-2010

According to The American Congress of Obstetricians & Gynecologists (ACOG), the Affordable Care Act would be a benefit to many U.S. women by providing more women with healthcare, thus improving their overall health. ACOG reports, "Uninsured women with breast cancer are 30-50% more likely to die from cancer or cancer complications than insured women with breast cancer." The best protection is early detection, which more women would be able to access with the help of health insurance.
