

Combating Energy Consumption with Sustainable Production

Sustainable Energy is derived from renewable resources and causes no long-term damage to the planet. However, the US production of sustainable energy in no way compares to the energy we consume, leaving a large carbon footprint.

North America leads all other continents in energy consumption, a good fraction of which comes from the US.

* Energy use measured per person with access to electricity

Meghan Wierschke
 Projection: US National Atlas
 Equal Area
 Central Meridian: -100
 Latitude of Origin: 45

