We woke up at 4am, grabbed McDonalds breakfast, and hit the road!

After a 12 hour car ride, we arrived in Asheville, NC. We spent our first two days of the trip climbing to the top of Mount Mitchell, the highest point in the US east of the Mississippi River. It stands at 6,684 ft above sea level.

We had an inside joke that Georgia was a drive through state. It ended up taking us 6 hours to get through and we had 10 miles of gas left when we finally made it to Chattanooga, TN.

After a short 7 hour drive, we arrived in Daytona Beach. We spent the next couple days relaxing at the beach before starting our 22 hour adventure home.

In order to save money, we decided to camp 30 minutes from the beach. It was incredibly humid and wet.

 These are the places we stopped for gas.
