Course Description. This course is an intermediate-level introduction to the geography of Africa. It is a course for undergraduates. While welcomed, no course work on Africa is required prior to taking this course. After a general overview of physical and historical geography in the first part of the course, we will focus on a number of important contemporary issues including population, urbanization, economic development, gender, AIDS pandemic, ethnicity and politics, and environmental change.

Readings. The class is organized so as to provide an increasingly rigorous, sophisticated view of African geography over the course of the semester. Required (REQ) and recommended (REC) readings will come from four sources:

2) Readings on reserve for this course in digital format accessible through the Learn@UW page for the course [RR]

Required readings for this course will come from the Stock textbook along with on-line reserved readings (RR) which are accessible through our Learn@UW course page (contents tab). The Stock textbook is available for purchase at the University Bookstore. An earlier edition of Stock (Second Edition) is on reserve in the Geography Library with those assigned sections that are the same in the second and third editions marked with an asterisk (*). Other readings are all available in digital format through the course’s Learn@UW page. Several readings are from two sources: 1. Nelson Mandela’s autobiography: Long Walk to Freedom; and 2. Moseley, W. ed. 2012. Taking Sides: Clashing Views on African Issues. 4th edition. McGraw-Hill [Moseley]. There will also be the occasional handout. Lectures and discussions will build from the reading material and therefore it is imperative that assigned reading for the week will be done prior to class meetings. Note: reserved reading assignments may be changed over the course of the semester but with little net increase in overall volume.

1) Exam 1 on the capitals and locations of the countries of Sub-Saharan Africa as well as the major patterns in its physical features (e.g. elevation, climate, vegetation – weeks 1-3).

2, 6) Response papers. You will be asked to respond to questions that concern assigned readings. Length of the response should not exceed 3 double-spaced pages.

3) Response to questions about assigned sections of Nelson Mandela’s Long Walk to Freedom that relate Mandela’s life to themes explored in weeks 7-8. The length of these responses will not exceed 2 double-spaced pages.

4) Some students will participate around in-class debates around issues raised in the Moseley readings and those around KONY 2012 (four students on each of the following dates: Sept 24, Oct 1, Oct 15, Oct 29, Nov 10, Nov 17, and Dec 3). Other students will update us on current events in Africa over the previous month on Sept 15, Oct 8, Nov 3, and Dec 8 (1-2 students each date).

5) Exam 2 covers the material covered in weeks 4-9. You will have access to your notes.

7) Debate on the question of China’s role in Africa using different news sources.

8) Class participation is a critical part of this course. You will be expected to contribute to class discussions. Asking questions about the reading or lecture material is also considered participation.

Written assignments are expected to be turned in on time with 10% of the maximum score deducted from scores for every day the assignment is late.

Grading

Letter grades for the course will be assigned based on the cumulative percentages of all work using a standard curve (see table to right). The distribution of cumulative scores vary from year to year and therefore in determining grades at the end of the semester, the cumulative score breaks between certain letter grades may be lower than those listed here (e.g. one may receive a higher letter grade than would be expected from the standard curve).

Graduate students: Graduate students who take this course will be assessed separately from other students in the course (exams and common work). In addition, extra work will be required. See Professor Turner for details.

Class Conduct

Attendance I expect every student to be on time to every class, fully engaged and prepared. An integral component of this course is discussion and for effective discussion all members of class need to be present and full engaged. In addition, some exam questions will come directly from lectures, films, and discussion; therefore, attendance is crucial to receiving a good grade. If you miss class you should still complete the readings and get notes from a classmate. You are also responsible for all information and handouts disseminated in class, as well as all course requirements, including deadlines and examinations. Those with more than one unexcused absences will lead to a reduction in the participation points (one-quarter of participation points for each additional unexcused absence represented 5% of grade).

Scholastic misconduct is broadly defined as "any act that violates the right of another student in academic work or that involves misrepresentation of your own work. Scholastic dishonesty includes, (but is not necessarily limited to): cheating on assignments or examinations and plagiarizing, which means misrepresenting as your own work any part of work done by another. Students found cheating or committing plagiarism on any of the assignments or examination in this course will receive a score of zero for that assignment or examination. If you have any doubts whether you know what constitutes plagiarism please visit the following website: http://plagiarism.org/plagiarism-101/what-is-plagiarism
